Open Web Application
Security Project

ABOUT US

OWASP (Open Web Application Security Project) is dedicated to making application security superior and accessible to all. We empower individuals, corporations and organizations to make informed decisions about true application security risks, giving them free resources and tools to be successful.

Our mission is to support safe software development by engaging a collaborative community of software security professionals, harnessing their collective power to transform the digital ecosystem.

OUR COMMUNITY

There are more than 200 active OWASP chapters worldwide, meeting several times annually to discuss application security. We are located on six continents and in over 80 countries. All OWASP chapters meetings are free, run by volunteers and open to the public.

OUR WORK

OWASP has hundreds of active projects and leaders working on tools, code and documentation aimed at improving application security worldwide. All OWASP projects are freely-available and licensed under community principles. By starting or joining an OWASP project, you get access to a community of members to help your software:

PROTECT – We'll help you create tools and documents to help guard against security-related design and implementation flaws.

DETECT – We'll help you find security-related design and implementation flaws.

LIFE CYCLE – We'll develop resources that can be used to add security-related activities into the Software Development Life Cycle (SDLC).

WHY WE NEED YOU?

We could not fulfill our mission without the support of individuals, corporations and organizations across the globe. There are many benefits of membership. (Paid membership is still not required, and all of our online resources are open, free and available for community use and growth.)
